A: Your answer depends on the number of lines. An even number of lines is the simple approach. An odd number of lines gives much more room for experimentation. The technique is as follows: Split the text by all lines. For each line, reverse the order of the characters (for the odd lines) or reverse only the first character (for the even lines). So if you have a text like this: foobar foobar foobar You can split it to "foobar and then reverse each string to :o foo bar (if you have an even line number) or foo :o bar (if you have an odd line number). Q: jQuery.load is not working for me I am trying to run a jQuery.load() function with an ajax call on an HTML page. The problem is that no matter what I do, I can not get it to load my.html file that is sitting on the web server. I have copied the function and all the HTML to a test page, and it still fails. My JavaScript $(document).ready(function() { $('a').click(function() { $('#load').load('/testPage.html'); return false; }); }); My HTML Load Link This Content Needs to be Loaded! I can not get the browser to recognize the #load on the page. Thanks for the help and any ideas on why it doesn't work. A: you need to add the url to your document's base tag, for example: A: Here is the solution that worked for me. $('a').click(function() { $('#load').load('/testPage.html?url='+encodeURIComponent(location.href)); return false; }); I just needed to include the location.href into my

A significant proportion of survivors of stroke often suffer from cognitive emotional processing deficits, which present considerable challenges in rehabilitation. This review will outline the current thinking in the neurobiology of cognitive and emotional deficits in stroke and explore the potential for new therapies. Deficits are likely to be due to a combination of altered cortical and subcortical structures, and a range of neural processes that play a central role in emotional and cognitive control. Effective rehabilitation for cognitive emotional processing involves the combined strategy of cortical and subcortical dysfunction which requires effective reorganization in response to feedback.liquor & Beer: The Carillon Case Study Jan. 13, 2016 | By The Ferments By Nowlan Carey Devour the essentials, luxuries and pairings for 2020 In the olden days, the people of Georgetown chose their spirits depending on weather, price and even the skill of the bartender. We would then sit down at the bar to enjoy our drinks and make plans for another round. But today, with the advent of cocktails, we are not restricted by the weather, the spirit, the local bartender or our next meal. We can enjoy every variety of beverage and celebrate with family, friends and the right company. So, what do we choose? How do we achieve this modern version of cocktail bliss? We choose by examining the core elements of our beverage selection: quality, style and the pairings that make life complete. And, in a way, it's a win-win situation. We enjoy the finest spirits and beers, and by choosing them, we 3e33713323
