I feel like I'm playing a special edition of Final Fantasy XIII I've found myself infatuated with the universe As a fresh new JRPG, it's not without its faults Where, as the incredibly awkward marketing copy puts it, "You'll discover that a white apple is an island beyond the sea. And each choice you make will affect the path you take. Because it's all up to you whether this island will be left as a peaceful garden or become a raging jungle." Click to expand...The linear citrate transporter CitS shares homologies with genes from multidrug resistance (mdr) and archaeal H⁺ antiporters. The gene encoding the (Na⁺ + H⁺)-coupled citrate antiporter CitS from Escherichia coli was cloned and sequenced. CitS contains 1285 amino acids, nine of which form the putative antiporter domain. Sequence analysis revealed remarkable similarities to members of the mdr and archaeal histidine transporter (AHT) families. The most striking sequence homology was observed in the central part of the protein, corresponding to the 12 transmembrane segments of the TMS-MFS. At the amino acid level, the transmembrane domains of CitS are homologous to MFS-type transporters from Salmonella typhimurium (MFS-9, dicarboxylate transporter 2), Pseudomonas sp. 342 (MFS-1, malate transporter) and E. coli (MFS-3, lactate permease). However, it differs most strikingly from the other MFS-type transporters that have been characterized to date. This finding suggests that CitS represents a new family of MFS-type transporters.
