Kötzing (4 May 1732 in Mindelheim – 17 February 1777 in Gießen) was a German explorer of the interior of Africa who was born in Kötzingen, Prussia on May 4, 1732. Johann von Kötzing was a pupil of the director of the "Freimüthige Christen-und Heyliger-Münsterzentrum oberhess." Later, the director sent him as a missionary of the Society of the Missions to the Heathen to the land of the Tshuapa. In 1764, Johann von Kötzing led an expedition to the land of the Tshuapa.
He reached the Maravi river in the late of 1764. In 1765, the Tshuapa attacked his group. His party fled to the north, but had to cross a river on rafts. Once on the other side, they took on a rafting on the river, but then it was on the other side, they had to travel overland on foot for 20 days. He led a second expedition in 1766. References Category:1732 births Category:1777 deaths Category:German arthritis of the knee. At the time of the review, 20 knees were considered to have a good result and 13 a satisfactory result, as assessed by clinical examination, radiography, and review of patient records. Eight of 23 knees were considered to have a poor result and had evidence of dysfunction on clinical examination. All the poor results in the present series were related to poor preoperative function and associated conditions, namely, polyarthritis, extreme obesity, and valgus deformity. At followup, there was no progression in the number of knees with a poor result, and the poor result persisted in all cases except one that had a graft. The results of the present series were better than those reported in a review of 60 knees. If your commitment to an R&D investment depends on the new partnership that emerges from it, you need to be careful how you manage it. You cannot be in a constant state of negotiation with potential partners, or you risk being left out as others pick up the ball. So how do you strike the balance between seeming too eager and not having enough faith in the partnership? It's a delicate dance to orchestrate the right sort of expectations within your team, particularly as it relates to your own changing capabilities. It might seem that your capacity has gone up; your team might have expanded and
