The serial numbers are used for a variety of purposes within the SOLIDWORKS system, including licensing, product registration, and troubleshooting. It is possible for multiple serial numbers to refer to a single license, but it is not generally possible for a single serial number to refer to more than one license. A serial number can be as long as 24 characters in length. However, if the serial number you specify is shorter than this length, the remainder of the serial number defaults to zeroes. A serial number with a length of 24 characters, for example, can be specified as follows: To deactivate a machine, simply use the SOLIDWORKS Help Menu at the top of the window and select Deactivate Licenses. (Note: You must be able to launch SOLIDWORKS in order to deactivate.) The only way to deactivate a standalone serial number is from within SOLIDWORKS. If you cannot deactivate, contact GoEngineer Technical Support. There are various ways of numbering in excel, which are Fill Handle, Fill Series, Row Function mainly. By Fill Handle, we can drag already written 2-3 numbers in sequence until the limit we want. By Fill Series, which is available in the Home menu tab and select the Series option, select the lowest and highest numbers. And if we select the Row function for numbering, then also we can create a number in the sequence. Make sure that the new serial number is the same as the license. Otherwise, you may be prompted to buy again a new license. If the new license is validated, then the previous serial number will be deactivated and the new serial number will be assigned. The validation of the new license is valid for 24 hours. If the new license is not validated, please contact Microsoft Support.
